Senate Committee Listens As Ex-Republican Tells Of His Position

Knox Fears Effect Of Nazi Victory On U. S.; Notes From Speech Read

WASHINGTON, July 2—Declaring that the United States is in immediate peril from aggressor nations, Henry L. Stimson, New York Republican nominated by President Roosevelt to be secretary of war, today urged this nation to give assistance to the British navy in her fight against Germany as a defense measure.

Stimson, testifying before the senate military affairs committee as it began consideration of his nomination, also urged compulsory military training, as he declared that any peace pact between Germany and the Allies may be short lived.

Bridges Wants Letter

Stimson's appearance led to an immediate demand by Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., that the White House make public the letter of resignation given by former Secretary of War Harry Woodring when he resigned to make way for Stimson. President Roosevelt said at the time Woodring quit that the letter was "too personal" for publication. But Sen. Bridges declared:

"I think the military affairs committee is entitled to know what is in it."

Stimson, in his testimony, warned that this nation might be in a precarious condition if Germany obtains control of the North Atlantic.

"Today the time which we will have for our rearmament is very largely dependent on the continuance of Great Britain's control of the North Atlantic," Stimson said in a prepared statement read before the committee.

"Under these conditions, any assistance which we can safely give toward the continuance of that sea power in the North Atlantic is a step most important to our own interest in preparation."

Stimson, assailed by members of the senate isolationist bloc as an "interventionist," vigorously defended his recommendation for naval aid to Great Britain.

He said that "the President and the congress recognized" the fact

OHIO ADJUTANT WARNS OF NEED FOR EQUIPMENT

OTTAWA, O., July 2—The United States Army does not have enough ammunition to carry on a major battle for one day, according to Ohio's Adj. Gen. Gilson D. Light.

That is what the Ohio National guard head told members of the Ottawa Kiwanis club in a speech in which he warned Americans generally against scoffing at the possibility of this country being invaded.

"I think it is in the books," Light asserted. "American men will fight, but they must have equipment to fight with."

He added that the state of the country's defense was "unbelievable," with great shortages of anti-tank, anti-aircraft and all light guns.

Light, who served in France during the World War, described the German army as the "greatest military machine the world has ever known." He predicted that the Nazis could "blow the British Isles to atoms" within a week or 10 days.

WEYGAND AT ATHENS ON WAY TO NEAR EAST DUTY

ATHENS, July 2—French General Maxime Weygand, who relieved General Maurice Gamelin as commander-in-chief of the Allied armies in France prior to the French capitulation, arrived in Athens today.

It was stated he would fly later to Beirut.

Before he replaced Gamelin Weygand was commander of the French armies in the Near East.

BRITISH AFRAID NAZIS MAY HIT IN EIRE REGION

London Taking Steps To Bring Unity Between Two Sections

'SPRINGBOARD' POSSIBLE

Island Grab Puts Planes Near Naval Bases Of Plymouth, Weymouth

LONDON, July 2—Important British quarters renewed pressure today for unity between northern Ireland and the Republic of Eire against a possible German invasion.

With German forces already occupying the British channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey off the French coast, demands were voiced with increasing intensity that Britain move immediately to persuade Ulster and Eire to reach a common decision to resist any Nazi assault.

The Dublin and Belfast Governments also were urged to seek the assistance of British troops in carrying out this aim.

Otherwise, it was believed, there is grave danger of Eire being used as a springboard for Germany's threatened invasion of England.

In some quarters there was criticism of the British Government on grounds that it was content to let the leaders of Ulster and Eire wrangle over the partition issue instead of stepping in with a courageous, war-time unity program.

Lord Craigavon, prime minister of northern Ireland, also was blamed for what some quarters termed a "stiff-necked attitude."

Replacement Asked

There were demands that he should be replaced by some one with a "more resilient outlook." Well informed Dublin quarters stated that strong American influence was being brought to bear on Eire regarding the unity proposal and that there were signs that Prime Minister Eamon De Valera is "prepared to go a good way."

George Bernard Shaw, famous Irish wit and playwright, entered the argument with an assertion that he believes Eire would resist an attempted German invasion.

If the British go about it in the "right way," said Shaw, Eire would willingly ask for protection of British troops.

German occupation of the two channel islands, carried out by Nazi air force units, placed the swastika on British territory in place of the Union Jack for the first time in history.

Near Naval Bases

The Channel Islands are about 100 miles from Portsmouth and Southampton, even closer to the naval base of Plymouth and Weymouth.

Shaw expressed his opinion about Eire in an interview with the London Daily Mail, which quoted him as stating:

ACTOR HOME FROM WAR URGES U. S. TO PREPARE

HOLLYWOOD, July 2—Back in Hollywood from France where he served as an ambulance driver for a month, Robert Montgomery, the film actor, today placed himself fully behind the nation's preparedness drive.

"We must be ready to defend ourselves," he declared. "The rapidity with which the French defenses were smashed, the appalling effect of the German attack, the terrible carnage resulting from the French inability to cope with mechanized warfare, should be a grim lesson to us."

"I spent 17 days at the front. I saw the full impact of the German drive. I am not predicting anything, but I know that we Americans owe it to the brave men who founded this nation just as we owe it to our children and our children's children to be ready for whatever may come."

CHICAGO MAYOR GALENTO 244 1/2 CERTAIN F. D. R. AND BAER 221 1/2 TO BE DRAFTED FOR RING JOUST

CHICAGO, July 2—In a "convention forecast" Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago declared today "there is not the slightest doubt" that President Roosevelt will be drafted for a third term at the National Democratic convention which opens July 15 in Chicago.

The mayor, who is an ardent New Dealer and Illinois Democratic chief, is expected to wield considerable influence at the convention, said the President's renomination is so certain that the only matter under discussion among national Democratic leaders concerns the identity of the vice presidential candidate.

"There is not the slightest doubt about it. President Roosevelt will be drafted," the mayor asserted. "We Illinois Democrats are for him, of course, but I am basing my statement on conversations I have had with the Democratic leadership throughout the country."

"The President has told me and others that he is not a candidate. He has had eight hard years, and the next four will be harder. But the rank and file of the people want him, and we are going to draft him on the first ballot."

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 2—

To the amazement of a gawking, jostling crowd assembled in the ball room of the Plaza Hotel, Tony Galento today weighed in at 244 1/2 pounds and Max Baer at 221 1/2 for their 15-round battle in Roosevelt Stadium tonight. For both principals, the weight was the greatest they have ever taken into the ring for any duly recorded battle, according to the records.

The poundage was far out of line with what they had announced they would scale and with the weight periodically given out by them during their workouts for the engagement.

The object of sometimes bitter criticism because of his poor showing against even his customarily inept sparring partners and because of his unenthusiastic training, Galento was by far the least impressive of the two in the pre-fight ceremonies today.

Shabbily dressed and bearing a memento on his chin of his Sunday night bar room fight, Galento quite obviously was not in condition.

Baer was the picture of sartorial elegance in a two-toned brown getup and either acted extremely well or actually is burning up and eager to give Galento a beating.

West Coast Hears Nazi Seamen Acting As Spies

SAN FRANCISCO, July 2—Charges that some 400 German seamen held at the Angel Island immigration station have become "a highly dangerous nucleus of Nazi espionage throughout the bay region" were reported today by the San Francisco Examiner.

While Nat Pieper, head of the San Francisco office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and military intelligence officers declined comment, the Examiner stated that, nevertheless, "it was learned reports and evidence have been put in their hands by irate citizens."

The German officers and sailors are former crew members of the Nazi luxury liner Columbus which was scuttled in the Atlantic last winter. More than 500 were brought to San Francisco, whence approximately 100 sailed during January and February for their homeland on Japanese and Italian vessels.

Charges of fifth column activities against the remaining 400 listed by the Examiner included: "Instead of being kept under close detention on the island, the Nazis have been able, by various means, to slip ashore in numbers

HOLLYWOOD, July 2—Too distressed to go into a more detailed explanation of her separation from Artie Shaw, red-haired Lana Turner, 19-year-old film starlet, sat in her Beverly Hills apartment today and contemplated her future.

The swing maestro and Miss Turner eloped to Las Vegas last February.

WILLKIE WANTS MAN TO DIRECT ALL ACTIVITIES

NEW YORK, July 2—Carrying into his political campaign the same unorthodox tactics which won for him the Republican presidential nomination, Wendell Willkie today indicated that he is looking for an exceptional type of campaign manager who will direct the efforts of both the national committee and the Willkie volunteer workers.

There has been some speculation as to how Willkie would coordinate his volunteer amateur support with the out-right political professionals of the Republican national committee.

His tentative plan is a "tripod" organization with the campaign manager at the top, the national committee chairman as one supporter and a leading volunteer worker as the other.

Such an organization would be expected to please the millions of volunteers who want no part of organized politics and also the regular organization which must necessarily play an important part in the campaign.

By this plan, the selection of a national chairman does not loom so important as in an orthodox campaign where he also is expected to function as campaign manager and chief coordinator.

YANKEES WIN PROTEST OVER 11-INNING GAME

CHICAGO, July 2—President Will Harridge of the American League today sustained a protest filed by the New York Yankees to an 11-inning game which on June 20 was scored 1-0 in favor of the Chicago White Sox. Harridge ordered the game replayed on a subsequent Yankee visit to Chicago. Harridge upheld the Yankee contention that Umpire John Quinn was in error when he ruled that Julius Solters caught a foul fly off Bill Dickey's bat in the second inning. Solters nabbed the ball, but dropped it when his cap fell off and he sought to retrieve it.

Muhlenberg Educators Protest Formation Of New School District

Protests to the Pickaway County Board of Education's action of June 5, when it voted unanimously to create a new school district from the Monroe and Muhlenberg areas, was made Tuesday when the Muhlenberg board filed suit in Common Pleas Court against the county board members.

In the petition, the Muhlenberg board cites three reasons for its protest.

1. That the county board is without legal authority to make such a combination.

2. That the county board has no legally adopted plan of organization for the new school district, filed with the State Director of Education as required by law.

3. That through a court decision in 1939 over the same controversy, the case has already been settled in its favor.

The Monroe-Muhlenberg situation was the basis for court action last year when the county board abolished the Muhlenberg board and assigned jurisdiction of the district to the Monroe board, after the transfer had been advised by the State Department of Education on the grounds that there was an insufficient number of pupils in the Muhlenberg High School. In the court action which followed, and which was carried to the Ohio Supreme Court, the Muhlenberg board won its case.

Action of the county board this year was prompted when petitions asking the creation of the new district were presented carrying names of a majority of the qualified electors in the two townships.

FURTHER RAINS MAY INCREASE TOLL OF FLOOD

AUSTIN, Tex., July 2—Further rains were threatened today in muddy south-central Texas where rampaging rivers already had taken a toll of ten lives and millions of dollars in property damage.

The known toll of the floods, with lightning suddenness on communities hundreds of miles apart was:

At Hallettsville, on the Lavaca River, seven known dead; search still on for additional bodies.

At LaGrange, on the Colorado, two known dead.

At Temple, one dead.

Thousands of acres along the Colorado and Guadalupe Rivers and along their tributaries were under water, which meant that crops there were a total loss. How many head of livestock and poultry were lost was a matter of conjecture until farmers have the opportunity to return to their caked homes. Numerous highways were washed out; several highway and railroad bridges were completely destroyed or damaged seriously.

At Hallettsville, where the peaceful Lavaca was transformed into a raging tidal wave, every business house in the town was damaged badly.

Loss Of Michigan By Taft Crucial Blow To Ohio Solon's Chances

Termining the 1940 Republican National Convention that nominated Wendell Willkie of Indiana and New York for the presidency as the most surprising he has ever attended, Renick W. Dunlap, Pickaway Township, addressed the Kiwanis Club Monday evening in an interesting extemporaneous talk. Mr. Dunlap had not planned to deliver an address, but he kept the club interested with his excellent account of the Philadelphia convention.

He said that when he arrived in Philadelphia on Saturday after attending the Kiwanis International convention in Minneapolis that he could have offered 50 to one on Willkie to win the nomination with no takers.

"By Sunday the odds had slipped, and by Monday they were even lower," he said, "Willkie continuing to gain strength every minute."

Mr. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture in the Coolidge and Hoover cabinets, said that Willkie had no apparent organization, but that his personal popularity and the demand from "back home" for his support put him in the nominee's seat ahead of Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Switches Surprising

"My greatest surprise," Mr. Dunlap said, "was in the switch of several delegations to Willkie. It is remarkable that none of Mr. Taft's colleagues in the senate provided him support when they dropped from the race. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan released his delegation to vote for anyone that it wished. It backed Willkie, Senator Capper of Kansas freed his delegation, and it went to Willkie. There were others who did the same thing. Several, including Capper, told me early in the convention that they couldn't see Willkie and didn't think he had a chance."

Mr. Dunlap attributed the great number of messages and telegrams from folk "back home" as swaying many of the delegations. "The Ohio delegation," he said, "pledged to support Mr. Taft with its 52 votes was swamped with messages from persons who asked that Willkie be supported. The delegation, as you know, remained with Mr. Taft to the end."

He referred to the unprecedented action of Governor Harold Stassen of Minnesota in delivering the keynote address and almost immediately jumping on the Willkie bandwagon. "This had never been done before," Mr. Dunlap said, "but since Mr. Willkie won I guess it is all right. Had Mr. Willkie lost it is safe to say that Mr. Stassen would probably never have been heard from again either in his own state or in national politics."

Michigan Loss Hurts

The loss of Michigan's delegation after Senator Vandenberg released it was the blow that broke Mr. Taft's campaign, the speaker said. He declared that had Michigan gone to Taft other states would have jumped on the Taft

WHITT TO SERVE LIFE TERM FOR BANK ROBBERY

Elmer Whitt, 30, charged with a $30,000 Cincinnati bank robbery and identified by employees of the Circleville Savings and Banking Company as one of a quintet who robbed the local bank December 5, and Ivan Phillips, 33, Marion, Whitt's colleague in the Cincinnati bank robbery, were sentenced to life imprisonment in Ohio Penitentiary Monday.

The two decided to waive a jury trial and submit their case to Criminal Court Judge Dudley M. Outcalt, who found both men guilty of having entered a bank to commit a felony. The sentence automatically became life imprisonment when Judge Outcalt refused to grant mercy.

bandwagon. "Instead," he pointed out, "Michigan went to Willkie and so did the rest of them."

He said that Governor John Bricker of Ohio could have had the nomination for vice-president, but that he had turned it down.

Mr. Dunlap attended the convention as a Taft supporter and worked for the Cincinnati man at Philadelphia, seeking support among various delegations. He praised the work of the Taft organization, of the Ohio delegation and of Mr. Taft's wife in seeking to nominate the Ohio senator.

"Wendell Willkie," Mr. Dunlap said, "will make a strong candidate, and I feel certain that if you ever meet him you'll vote for him."

Kiwanians, meeting at the Pickaway Country Club, decided to take a hand in the Boy Scout campaign for funds with which to operate during 1940. Several of the members took names to solicit for contributions. The Rotary Club is cooperating also.

All members of the club were urged to choose the boys they wish to attend the Kiwanis Health Camp to be conducted on Darby Creek on Wayne Hoover's land. Names of all boys should be presented next Monday evening.

The club has decided to play a three out of five game softball series with the Lancaster club with a chicken dinner at stake. The first game will be July 11 at Lancaster. The local club will practice Friday evening on the northend playground lot at 6:30. All club members who wish to participate must report at that time.

Just to make sure that the Wild West Cowboy outfit, which came in Sunday, would get located in the right spot to suit their stunts, I went out to the park to look things over. Everybody and everything was on the move getting all set for the big day Thursday. Everything to make this Ashville Day the "biggest and best of them all" is being done with nothing omitted.

Plenty of entertainment for all. At least three bands, the Lincoln High school band of Gahanna; Union Furnace High School band; V. F. W. Post band; Foreign Wars Drum Corps, Columbus. And with these are the Service Battery with field artillery with kitchen and medical detachment special troops of twenty member of Circleville.

Fish fry, dancing, fireworks and stunts in plenty for all.

S. F. Martin who recently purchased the cabinet shop of the late Taylor Brintlinger is making several improvements to the place, among them, a wooden floor.

Guy Partee, a resident of Harrison Township and well known here, began a clerkship with the Morris hardware store, taking the place of Harvey Trone off duty because of sickness.

William M. Brobeck, wife and youngster Jerry Goodrich, arrived here from Kansas City to be guests for a few days of Mr. Brobeck's father, William H. Brobeck. The son has operated a restaurant in the named Western city for several years and is here on a short vacation.

Mrs. Harmon Wright with her three sons, William, Charles and Bobby are here from Johnstown spending a few days at the home of her parents, Milton and Mrs. Hott.

Dick Peters, one of our local civil engineers with a contracting firm, has been assigned work of a waterworks installation at Seamon, Adams County, which, he told us, would require most of the coming year. Within the next couple of weeks Mr. Peters, wife and little Miss Marian will remove from Ashville to Seamon.

Another new, modern dwelling will be in the "staging off" stage maybe by tomorrow. It's George Kuhlwein with location in East Lawn addition. Possible builders, Harley Musselman, George Hardbarger.

The village council in session Monday evening paid bills amounting to $379.45. Completed resolution placing estimated cost of municipal building on tax duplicate list. Ordered tarvia for needed street repair work.

STATE IN DEBT TO COUNTY FOR CRIMINAL CASES

Costs Totalling $5,560 Not Paid Despite Law, Claims Auditor Ferguson

ASSEMBLY ACTION VITAL

Nearly Million On Books In Favor Of Other Ohio Districts

The state of Ohio owes Pickaway County $5,560 in criminal court costs which have been accumulating since 1935, State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson disclosed Tuesday and at the same time reported that the state's debt to all 88 counties totals $900,000.

The amount represents funds expended by the counties for the conviction of criminals and their transportation to penal institutions. Although state laws provide that counties be reimbursed for such expenditures, no funds have been appropriated by the General Assembly for such purposes since 1935, Ferguson added.

"Time and again, county officials have sought to collect the money due them for this purpose, but nothing has been done about it," Ferguson said. "And of course nothing can be done about it until the legislature meets next January. Even then, the Assembly may decide not to include these bills in its budget."

The state auditor estimated that before the end of the year the state will owe the counties more than $1,000,000.

It was learned that county officials have attempted to "charge off" amounts owed them by the state on bills presented to counties for the upkeep of their feeble-minded and insane patients in state institutions.

Such proposals, however, were outlawed by a bill passed in 1937 which gave the state the power to withhold sales tax revenues from counties which failed to pay for the upkeep of their patients.

A study of records in Ferguson's office revealed that the state owes the largest bill for criminal court costs to Cuyahoga County—a total of $209,733 from 1935 to June 1, 1940.

Next largest debt for the same period is marked up for Lucas County, $87,359, then Hamilton, a total of $72,194.

The total for all counties as of June 1, records showed, was $832,054. Bills for June have not yet reached the auditor's office or have not been tabulated.

"Nothing can be done about paying these until an appropriation for that specific purpose is made by the legislature," Ferguson said.

TWO FORFEIT BONDS

Ernest Nungster, 19, Ashville, and Lloyd Nungster, 20, East Union Street, charged with shooting firecrackers within the city limits, forfeited $5 bonds when they failed to appear in Mayor William Cady's court Monday night. The youths, with Thomas Booth, 16, Route 2, Circleville, were arrested Saturday night.

tates for a national convention. I hope the Democrats have more to offer us."

The only candidate that interested the 73-year-old pension leader was Wendell Willkie, but he couldn't get near him.

"Every time I tried to see Willkie he was surrounded by a mob of shouting supporters," groaned Townsend. "I finally gave up and decided to wash my hands of the whole business."

FORD AIRPLANE MOTORS

The dispute with Henry Ford over producing 6,000 Rolls-Royce airplane engines for Great Britain had more behind it than met the eye.

Among other things it illustrated one of the major national defense problems of the country—plant capacity. In order to arm in a hurry huge factory space is necessary, and Ford has it, in fact has boasted that he could produce 1,000 airplane engines daily.

Arm in a hurry, huge factory space is necessary, and Ford has it, in fact has boasted that he could produce 1,000 airplane engines daily.

To take advantage of this, National Defense mogul Knudsen, head of General Motors and a rival of Ford, gave him an order for 9,000 Rolls-Royce motors. Actually, Knudsen could have handled the order in his own General Motors plant, but he leaned over backward against favoritism. His own Allison airplane motor competes with the Rolls-Royce.

Therefore, Edsel Ford came to Washington and accepted the order, subject to the approval of his father. Later he telephoned his father in Detroit and reported to Knudsen that the 9,000 engines would be manufactured—3,000 for the United States, 6,000 for England at a cost of $14,500 per engine.

Knudsen immediately reported this to the War Department where it was considered one of the most important steps so far taken toward fulfilling the goal of 50,000 airplanes. For the United States, by taking advantage of the bulk British order, was getting a cheaper price.

NO MOTOR MONEY

However, Assistant War Secretary Louis Johnson immediately raised the red flag of no money. Congress had not appropriated enough funds for these new airplane engines, he said. However, Johnson immediately telephoned to Jimmy Byrnes, able administration manipulator in the Senate and a member of the Appropriations Committee.

"Senator," said Johnson, "we've got a bargain order for 3,000 airplane engines placed with Ford if we can get $43,500,000. Can you put that amount through your committee?"

"The committee's in session right now," Byrnes replied. "Have you got the OK of the Budget Bureau?"

So Senator Byrnes held the Appropriations Committee in session for thirty minutes more while Johnson telephoned the Budget Bureau and the White House to get their approval. A few minutes thereafter, the Senate committee OK'd the $43,500,000.

All this was done in one afternoon, just before Edsel Ford reported that he had received his father's telephonic OK.

Everyone at the War Department was congratulating Knudsen when suddenly Henry Ford issued his statement refusing to manufacture motors for England or any belligerent. Disappointed, Knudsen immediately went to Detroit, argued with him at length, but the elder Ford was adamant.

So now the order is going to Packard.

Note—Ford maintains plants in Canada and England which cooperate with the British on war supplies.

MORE DEFENSE MONEY

Within the next few days, Congress may get an intimate closeup of the national defense picture and be asked to make additional huge outlays.

Reason for this is the necessity of spending money in a hurry in order to enlarge American factory capacity. . . . Naturally, industry won't increase its plant capacity merely because large orders might come in case of war. Industry has got to have the actual orders in hand before it can spend for plant expansion.

What the United States needs for national defense, however, is an expanded industrial system now, one which could manufacture prodigious quantities a few days—not a few months—after war broke.

To illustrate, smokeless gunpowder is probably the most necessary material in any war. But the plant capacity for making gunpowder in the United States is only 20,000,000 pounds annually. To get an idea of how little this is, compare it with the fact that at the end of the World War our capacity was up to 400,000,000 pounds, while new

CONSUMERS TAX MAY BE ASKED IN CAPITAL CITY

COLUMBUS, July 2—Columbians today were faced with the possibility of being assessed a three percent consumers' service tax in addition to the state sales tax, as Mayor Floyd Green recommended the levy to raise approximately $1,000,000 annually to aid the financially-distressed city. The levy would go into effect immediately following its approval by council.

Meanwhile, council insured garbage collections for at least the next three weeks when it approved a "paper" appropriation of $8,000 for that purpose.

Council also: Asked the state tax commission to approve a $203,000 delinquent tax issue so the city could qualify for $234,000 under the Milroy relief act. The $234,000 represents the deficiency caused by relief expenditures the last six months of 1939.

Earmarked three percent, or approximately $43,000, of city waterworks funds for relief purposes, permissible under state law.

Transferred $8,800 from the provisions and fuel department of charities to pay relief clients' rents for July.

Transferred $4,500 from delinquent funds in the division of electricity to pay department workers for the latter part of June.

In recommending the consumers' service tax, Mayor Green told councilmen that an income tax levy or garbage collection fees, previously recommended, would be unnecessary. He said the proposed new tax would be similar in some respects to the state sales levy, but would be imposed on services rendered by doctors, lawyers, dentists, filling stations, and others in similar categories.

Council, however, made it plain it would approve no financing plan until a special emergency survey of the city's financial condition is completed.

STASSEN LOOMS AS ADVISER FOR G. O. P. NOMINEE

NEW YORK, July 2—Young Harold Stassen who swung a lantern from the rear end of a train before he was governor of Minnesota appeared today to have dropped into the slot as chief political adviser of Wendell Willkie.

Stassen remained in town today at the request of Willkie to go further into the issues and plans for the campaign which the Hoosier will open once the Democratic National Convention is out of the way.

The 33 year old governor was with Willkie for several hours yesterday and was scheduled to be with him for several hours today.

"Harold wanted to leave last night, but I asked him to stay another day," Willkie said. "I hope he will take an active part in my campaign."

There was also indication that Thomas E. Dewey, defeated for the nomination, has hit the Willkie sawdust trail.

"Tom has called me up several times," Willkie said. He added that as a result of conversations with Dewey, he had written Senator Thomas of Idaho, urging him to run again for the senate.

Thomas had been quoted as saying that if Dewey was defeated, he would not run.

The amazing thing about the Stassen-Willkie relationship is that they did not meet until May 11 when Willkie addressed a Republican group in Minneapolis.

KELLY ASSAILS NATION'S LACK OF PREPARATION

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 2—

"National do-nothing complacency" was blamed today by Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, for the United States' lack of preparedness.

Addressing the National Education Association, Kelly said that after the World War the Legion, aware that the nation was not prepared, went on record for "a national military and naval system based on universal military obligation, to include a relatively small regular army and navy, and a citizen army and navy capable of rapid expansion to meet any national emergency."

But after the World War emergency had passed, the Legion commander added, the nation became complacent, the Legion's warnings went unheeded, "and we are today paying the enormous price of trying to catch up."

CHICAGO, July 2—Organization of the "Stark Club of Chicago" was revealed today by a group of business men boosting the candidacy of Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri for Democratic nomination either as president or vice president.

Stark for the presidential nomination if Mr. Roosevelt was not a candidate, and for the vice presidency if the President seeks a third term.

"Gov. Stark's personal friends and admirers in Chicago believe that the great Middle West and the West should have a place on the national ticket," Lewis said.

JUDGE RESUMES COURT HEARING ASKED BY CULT

COLUMBUS, July 2—Hearing was resumed today in federal court on an injunction suit filed by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society and Jehovah's Witnesses, a religious sect, to force state officials to permit the organization the right to use the state fairgrounds in Columbus for a national convention, July 24-28. John T. Brown, director of agriculture, recently revoked the Witnesses' permit to use the fairgrounds following alleged disturbances involving the sect in several states.

Judge Mell G. Underwood was expected to rule today on a motion filed by Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert to quash the action on the grounds that the court had no jurisdiction to rule in the matter.

Attorney for the defense, Hayden Covington, of Brooklyn, N. Y., contends that the federal court has jurisdiction because the state is refusing the Witnesses the rights of "unlawful assemblage."

STATE IN DEBT TO COUNTY FOR CRIMINAL CASES

Costs Totalling $5,560 Not Paid Despite Law, Claims Auditor Ferguson

ASSEMBLY ACTION VITAL

Nearly Million On Books In Favor Of Other Ohio Districts

The state of Ohio owes Pickaway County $5,560 in criminal court costs which have been accumulating since 1935, State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson disclosed Tuesday and at the same time reported that the state's debt to all 88 counties totals $900,000.

The amount represents funds expended by the counties for the conviction of criminals and their transportation to penal institutions. Although state laws provide that counties be reimbursed for such expenditures, no funds have been appropriated by the General Assembly for such purposes since 1935, Ferguson added.

"Time and again, county officials have sought to collect the money due them for this purpose, but nothing has been done about it," Ferguson said. "And of course nothing can be done about it until the legislature meets next January. Even then, the Assembly may decide not to include these bills in its budget."

The state auditor estimated that before the end of the year the state will owe the counties more than $1,000,000.

It was learned that county officials have attempted to "charge off" amounts owed them by the state on bills presented to counties for the upkeep of their feebleminded and insane patients in state institutions.

Such proposals, however, were outlawed by a bill passed in 1937 which gave the state the power to withhold sales tax revenues from counties which failed to pay for the upkeep of their patients.

A study of records in Ferguson's office revealed that the state owes the largest bill for criminal court costs to Cuyahoga County—a total of $209,733 from 1935 to June 1, 1940.

Next largest debt for the same period is marked up for Lucas County, $87,359, then Hamilton, a total of $72,194.

The total for all counties as of June 1, records showed, was $832,054. Bills for June have not yet reached the auditor's office or have not been tabulated.

"Nothing can be done about paying these until an appropriation for that specific purpose is made by the legislature," Ferguson said.

The only candidate that interested the 73-year-old pension leader was Wendell Willkie, but he couldn't get near him.

FORD AIRPLANE MOTORS

The dispute with Henry Ford over producing 6,000 Rolls-Royce airplane engines for Great Britain had more behind it than met the eye.

Among other things it illustrated one of the major national defense problems of the country—plant capacity. In order to arm in a hurry huge factory space is necessary, and Ford has it, in fact has boasted that he could produce 1,000 airplane engines daily.

arm in a hurry, huge factory space is necessary, and Ford has it, in fact has boasted that he could produce 1,000 airplane engines daily.

To take advantage of this, National Defense mogul Knudsen, head of General Motors and a rival of Ford, gave him an order for 9,000 Rolls-Royce motors. Actually, Knudsen could have handled the order in his own General Motors plant, but he leaned over backward against favoritism. His own Allison airplane motor competes with the Rolls-Royce.

Therefore, Edsel Ford came to Washington and accepted the order, subject to the approval of his father. Later he telephoned his father in Detroit and reported to Knudsen that the 9,000 engines would be manufactured—3,000 for the United States, 6,000 for England at a cost of $14,500 per engine.

Knudsen immediately reported this to the War Department where it was considered one of the most important steps so far taken toward fulfilling the goal of 50,000 airplanes. For the United States, by taking advantage of the bulk British order, was getting a cheaper price.

NO MOTOR MONEY

However, Assistant War Secretary Louis Johnson immediately raised the red flag of no money. Congress had not appropriated enough funds for these new airplane engines, he said. "I would tell Ireland that she is entitled to claim the protection of British forces. I think if it were put this way, Ireland immediately would demand that British forces be sent."

LONDON, July 2 — Awaiting Chancellor Hitler's promised Nazi invasion attempt, Great Britain counted 12 more dead today as a result of a new series of German air raids.

The 12 were killed and 20 others were injured — many of them women and children, when German raiders dropped bombs on a town on the northern coast of Scotland. Three houses were demolished and others were damaged.

Four of the dead were children who had been playing in the street when the bombs fell.

An official announcement said four persons were slightly injured and little material damage was done by German bombs dropped in the Bristol channel area.

According to the official statement, German planes crossed the coast shortly before midnight and attacked the Bristol channel region, where anti-aircraft batteries went into action.

Guns and searchlights also were active in northeastern, northwestern and southwestern England. German planes bombed the Welsh coastline.

BERLIN, July 2 — Heavy damage to docks and shipping along the British Coast was claimed in the official communiqué of the German high command today. The statement said:

"On June 30 and July 1, air force units took the British Channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey by a coup, enabling occupation by naval shock troops and army units."

"German reconnaissance plane shot down two British Bristol-Blenheims in air battle."

"During an armed reconnoitering flight across the channel one British coastal patrol ship was attacked and set afire east of Torquay yesterday afternoon."

"Another successful attack was carried out against Wick, port in northern Scotland."

"On the night of July 1 to July 2 our fighters re-attacked the docks and piers in Bristol Channel and observed fires and explosions."

"During the attacks by British planes last night on northern and western Germany, bombs were dropped at Kiel, causing only a little damage. Some civilians were killed."

"Altogether, five enemy planes were shot down by anti-aircraft guns and two additional planes were shot down by naval anti-aircraft batteries during the night attack on Kiel. Three German planes are missing."

"The total number of enemy planes shot down in the air battles June 30-July 1 was increased by five to make a total of 23."

Library Notes

All About Coffee — by W. H. Uker. This encyclopedic work of 818 pages has been presented to the library by the Tea & Coffee Trade Journal of New York. The author, an authority on tea and coffee, has written a number of books on the subject and made several trips to various parts of the world while collecting his material. The book is very inclusive, containing almost anything one would want to know about coffee from its discovery and first use by the Arabs about 800 A. D. down through its colorful and romantic history to the present time. In this account Mr. Uker includes a history of coffee drinking and the introduction of coffee into Europe and America; a discussion of the famous Coffee Houses; the cultivation and preparation of coffee and development of the coffee industry; the etymology, botany, microscopy, chemistry, and pharmacology of coffee; the world's coffee manners and customs; the evolution of coffee apparatus (including many interesting antiquities); the history of coffee in literature and its relation to the Fine Arts. SCHOOL MEN TO DISCUSS NATIONAL DEFENSE TASK

George D. McDowell, superintendent of Pickaway County schools, will attend a meeting at Ohio State University Thursday, July 11, where plans for a school program which will comply with the government's needs for national defense, will be discussed by members of the State Board of Vocational Education and the State Department of Education. It is believed that the program will give school students training which will equip them to aid in national defense program. The meeting is open to county and local superintendents and school teachers. It will be held at University Chapel.

ing demands on Romania despite Soviet Russia's precipitate action in annexing Bessarabia and northern Bukovina. Reliable informants in Hungary have maintained from the outset that Budapest would eschew any unilateral action pending a definite reappointment of interests by Germany and Italy.

Meanwhile, Romania continued tense and on a full war footing. King Carol's government decreed an 8:30 curfew, effective tonight. Troops patrolled the streets of Bucharest and field-guns and machine-guns were placed at strategic intersections. Reports persisted that Carol would reorganize his government, placing some "strong man" in the premiership to preserve public order.

M. Bardsi, Hungarian minister of Bucharest, arrived in Budapest during the day, presumably bearing some information regarding the current Rome-Berlin mediation plans.

Hungary itself, determined to "prevent surprises," continued massing troops along the border facing Transylvania which was handed to Romania in 1918.

Authorities stated that most Budapest bus lines would cease functioning tomorrow. They insisted, however, that Hungary is maintaining a "peaceful attitude."

Tension and uncertainty spread in the Balkans as the Russians completed their occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina, ceded by Romania and Russian troops lined the entire northern side of the Danube delta.

(A Budapest dispatch to the London Daily Express said it was stated officially that no Hungarian announcement regarding mobilization could be expected "because that term (mobilization) is out of date in modern tactics and because the same end already is being achieved.")

Guarantees Broken
Another significant development, reflecting the swift trend of events in the Balkans, was Romania's renunciation of the Anglo-French guarantee of Romanian integrity. This move was approved unanimously by the Romanian cabinet at Bucharest.

The Romanian foreign office announced that the Anglo-French guarantee was rejected within the framework of "reorientation of Romanian foreign policy."

This statement added that the Romanian government had determined that a "new European order is in course of establishment."

Diplomatic circles in London pointed out that since the guarantee of Romania's integrity was unilateral, the Romanian decision to renounce it does not affect the British government's freedom to decide whether circumstances calling for implementation of the guarantee have arisen.)

Constanza Port Avoided
Romanian ships were warned to avoid the port of Constanza. Scores of them crowded into the Danube River from the Black Sea.

Budapest authorities commented that the situation of Romania is similar to that of Czechoslovakia in 1938, when a period of military preparedness in Europe preceded the Munich conference and the preliminary partitioning of Czechoslovakia.

Today the Romanian general staff reported that still more clashes had occurred between Romanian troops and the rapidly advancing Russian forces. It was stated, however, that these "misunderstandings" were cleared up quickly after short skirmishes occurred.

Reports received in Budapest indicated that an estimated 300 persons were killed during the weekend "Communist rebellion" at Galatz, where Romanian troops and police fired on demonstrating Reds.

While exact details of the Hungarian military measures were withheld in Budapest, political quarters insisted that Hungary was not pressing her territorial claims against Romania at the moment. These quarters said they believed the Rome-Berlin axis "would do its best to liquidate the injustices of the Paris peace treaty."

Hungarian policy, they added, will conform to the intentions of the Italo-German axis. Romanian reports of a Hungaro-Romanian frontier clash at Marmaros were denied by Budapest officials.

MOSCOW, July 2 — Russian occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina, ceded to the Soviet Union by Romania, has been completed, it was announced officially today.

A government statement said: "Soviet troops in northern Bukovina established themselves on a frontier with Romania. Soviet troops in Bessarabia accomplished their task along the entire length of the Pruth and Danube River line, where they reached their frontier with Romania."

spokesman, clearly indicating that major steps toward this end had already been taken, declared:

"The Reich has no reason to look with special concern on Balkan developments."

With regard to sensational rumors published in the United States that Germany had decided to back Romania against Soviet Russia, Bulgaria and Hungary with force of arms, the spokesman said there was nothing to them whatsoever.

German military planes may have arrived at Brasov, he declared, but they have been doing so for many months past.

Supplied For Year

"It may be recalled," he said, "that the Romanian army and air force for the last year have been almost entirely equipped by Germany or by the various armament works which the Reich now dominates."

"Military airplanes and all sort of equipment have been sent regularly in repayment for Romanian oil and wheat deliveries to Germany."

According to the German spokesman, there will eventually be an "orderly and peaceful revision" of the entire Balkan set-up. Indefinite continuation of the present status is undesirable, it was pointed out, but all outstanding problems prevailing among Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary are capable of settlement in an amicable manner.

Consultations have already taken place between Hungary and Romania regarding Hungary's recent military moves. It is not correct to say that Hungary has mobilized, the spokesman declared. Strengthening of Hungarian border garrisons was regarded as merely one step in the eventual peaceful revision of frontiers.

LONDON, July 2 — Soviet Russia moved into Bessarabia and Bukovina to "safeguard" herself against mounting German power, a well-informed Soviet source in London asserted today.

The move was made, this informant declared, when King Carol after considerable vacillation showed definite signs of aligning himself with Berlin and Rome.

Thus the occupation was described as a purely defensive measure to safeguard the vital Odessa region in the Black Sea from German encroachment.

"Russia plans no aggression against Germany but is bound to take protective measures in vital spheres," the spokesman said. "Russo-German relations should continue to be friendly, but the future obviously hinges on the attitude of Hungary and Bulgaria."

"The U.S.S.R. will model her attitude on that of Turkey. Neither will move without the other."

"Until the whole Balkan situation is clarified, it is difficult to predict the future."

Senate Committee Listens

Of His Position

that Britain must receive aid "when the former recommended and the latter enacted last autumn the repeal of the automatic arms embargo."

WASHINGTON, July 2 — Col. Frank Knox, Chicago Republican appointed by President Roosevelt to be secretary of the navy, today told the senate naval affairs committee considering his nomination that this nation gravely fears "the effects on us of a German victory."

Col. Knox, who was the G.O.P. vice-presidential candidate in 1936, was called before the committee to give his views on foreign policy.

Knox started his testimony by reading excerpts of a speech he made on October 24 last year before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

In that speech, according to Knox, he said:

"I am one of those who refuse to believe we will actually participate in this new (Europe's) war—certainly not to the extent of sending an army overseas."

"And if we do not do that, all these trumped up fears of a war time dictatorship and the destruction of both our Democratic institutions and our free enterprise economy are fantastically unreal."

Explains Attitude
That, Knox told the committee, best shows his attitude on "our economic system in peace and war."

Knox faced a committee hostile to President Roosevelt's plans to aid the Allies in all methods short of war. It was this same committee that recently blocked sale of high-speed navy torpedo boats to Great Britain.

Anti-administration members of the committee predicted that an adverse report on the nomination of Knox would ultimately be given to the senate. However, it was believed that the Roosevelt forces held enough votes in the senate to override any possible adverse report and confirm Knox's nomination.

Knox, in his testimony, said that he believed that this country was "too much disposed to compare conditions in the United States now . . . with conditions as they were in the United States 25 years ago."

DEARBORN, Mich., July 2 — A spokesman for the Ford Motor Co. today denied reports circulated in New York that Henry Ford had been threatened and that the FBI would be asked to guard the Ford family on July 13 when Henry Ford 2nd, the motor magnate's grandson, marries Anne McDonnell.

"Since Mr. Ford made his announcement regarding the manufacture of planes for American defense," the spokesman said, "we have received hundreds of letters praising his stand and only a very few criticizing it."

In New York it was reported threats had been made against Ford because of his refusal to manufacture airplane engines for Great Britain.

"We normally receive a number of crank letters," the spokesman continued, "but recently those have decreased. We have no intention of asking the FBI to guard the family."

would object more forcibly to a German invasion than to a British investment. They would welcome British troops if handled properly.

"I would tell Ireland that she is entitled to claim the protection of British forces. I think if it were put this way, Ireland immediately would demand that British forces be sent."

LONDON, July 2 — Awaiting Chancellor Hitler's promised Nazi invasion attempt, Great Britain counted 12 more dead today as a result of a new series of German air raids.

The 12 were killed and 20 others were injured — many of them women and children, when German raiders dropped bombs on a town on the northern coast of Scotland. Three houses were demolished and others were damaged.

Four of the dead were children who had been playing in the street when the bombs fell.

An official announcement said four persons were slightly injured and little material damage was done by German bombs dropped in the Bristol channel area.

According to the official statement, German planes crossed the coast shortly before midnight and attacked the Bristol channel region, where anti-aircraft batteries went into action.

Guns and searchlights also were active in northeastern, northwestern and southwestern England. German planes bombed the Welsh coastline.

BERLIN, July 2 — Heavy damage to docks and shipping along the British Coast was claimed in the official communiqué of the German high command today. The statement said:

"On June 30 and July 1, air force units took the British channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey by a coup, enabling occupation by naval shock troops and many units."

"A German reconnaissance plane shot down two British Bristol-Blenheims in air battle. During an armed reconnaissance flight across the channel one British coastal patrol ship was attacked and set afire east of Torquay yesterday afternoon."

"Another successful attack was carried out against Wleick, port in northern Scotland."

"On the night of July 1 to July 2 our fighters re-attacked the docks and piers in Bristol Channel and observed fires and explosions."

"During the attacks by British planes last night on northern and western Germany, bombs were dropped at Kiel, causing only a little damage. Some civilians were killed."

"Altogether, five enemy planes were shot down by anti-aircraft guns and two additional planes were shot down by naval anti-aircraft batteries during the night attack on Kiel. Three German planes are missing."

"The total number of enemy planes shot down in the air battles June 30-July 1 was increased by five to make a total of 23."

Library Notes

All About Coffee — by W. H. Uker. This encyclopedic work of 818 pages has been presented to the library by the Tea & Coffee Trade Journal of New York. The author, an authority on tea and coffee, has written a number of books on the subject and made several trips to various parts of the world while collecting his material. The book is very inclusive, containing almost anything one would want to know about coffee from its discovery and first use by the Arabs about 800 A. D. down through its colorful and romantic history to the present time. In this account Mr. Uker includes a history of coffee drinking and the introduction of coffee into Europe and America; a discussion of the famous Coffee Houses; the cultivation and preparation of coffee and development of the coffee industry; the etymology, botany, microscopy, chemistry, and pharmacology of coffee; the world's coffee manners and customs; the evolution of coffee apparatus (picturing many interesting antiques); the history of coffee in literature and its relation to the Fine Arts.

All About Coffee is an excellent reference book fully covering all phases of coffee history and coffee trading; it is well illustrated, appeals to the general reader, the student writing a research paper, or those directly associated with the coffee industry. The schools will find it to be an excellent source for much material.

Indefinite continuation of the present status is undesirable, he was pointed out, but all outstanding problems prevailing among Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary are capable of settlement in an amicable manner.

Consultations have already taken place between Hungary and Romania regarding Hungary's recent military moves. It is not correct to say that Hungary has mobilized, the spokesman declared. Strengthening of Hungarian border garrisons was regarded as merely one step in the eventual peaceful revision of frontiers.

LONDON, July 2 — Soviet Russia moved into Bessarabia and Bukovina to "safeguard" herself against mounting German power, a well-informed Soviet source in London asserted today.

The move was made, this informant declared, when King Carol after considerable vacillation showed definite signs of aligning himself with Berlin and Rome.

Of His Position

that Britain must receive aid "when the former recommended and the latter enacted last autumn the repeal of the automatic arms embargo."

WASHINGTON, July 2 — Col. Frank Knox, Chicago Republican appointed by President Roosevelt to be secretary of the navy, today told the senate naval affairs committee considering his nomination that this nation gravely fears "the effects on us of a German victory."

Col. Knox, who was the G.O.P. vice-presidential candidate in 1936, was called before the committee to give his views on foreign policy.

Knox started his testimony by reading excerpts of a speech he made on October 24 last year before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

In that speech, according to Knox, he said:

"I am one of those who refuse to believe we will actually participate in this new (Europe's) war—certainly not to the extent of sending an army overseas."

"And if we do not do that, all these trumped up fears of a war time dictatorship and the destruction of both our Democratic institutions and our free enterprise economy are fantastically unreal."

Explains Attitude
That, Knox told the committee, best shows his attitude on "our economic system in peace and war."

Knox faced a committee hostile to President Roosevelt's plans to aid the Allies in all methods short of war. It was this same committee that recently blocked sale of high-speed navy torpedo boats to Great Britain.

Anti-administration members of the committee predicted that an adverse report on the nomination of Knox would ultimately be given to the senate. However, it was believed that the Roosevelt forces held enough votes in the senate to override any possible adverse report and confirm Knox's nomination.

Knox, in his testimony, said that he believed that this country was "too much disposed to compare conditions in the United States now... with conditions as they were in the United States 25 years ago."

A cartoonist's nightmare would be news that Hitler has gotten a hair-cut and Mussolini is raising a beard.

POPULATION OF COLUMBUS GOES TO 304,972 IN 1940

COLUMBUS, July 2—The 1940 population of the city of Columbus is 304,972, representing an increase of 14,408, or 4.95 percent, over the 1930 figure, District Census Supervisor Robert F. Ebling announced today. The 1930 population was 290,564.

Present population of Franklin County, outside the city limits, was reported by Ebling as 82,425, as against 70,491 in 1930, an increase of 11,934, or 18.48 percent.

The 1940 population of Columbus suburbs included: Bexley, 8,670; Westerville, 3,319; Grandview, 6,940; Worthington, 1,555; Upper Arlington, 5,349.

ceremony, the story said, but the Southampton police "probably will request additional help in throwing protection around the Ford family."

DEARBORN, Mich., July 2—A spokesman for the Ford Motor Co. today denied reports circulated in New York that Henry Ford had been threatened and that the FBI would be asked to guard the Ford family on July 13 when Henry Ford 2nd, the motor magnate's grandson, marries Anne McDonnell.

"Since Mr. Ford made his announcement regarding the manufacture of planes for American defense," the spokesman said, "we have received hundreds of letters praising his stand and only a very few criticizing it."

In New York it was reported threats had been made against Ford because of his refusal to manufacture airplane engines for Great Britain.

"We normally receive a number of crank letters," the spokesman continued, "but recently those have decreased. We have no intention of asking the FBI to guard the family."

Messrs. Baer And Galento Ready For Ring Contest

Anything May Happen As Two Behemoths Tangle At Jersey City

By Lawton Carver
JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 2—Those two eminent survivors of mispent youth and old age, Tony Baer and Max Galento, were expected to weigh-in today at about 235 and 215 pounds, respectively, needle each other with some nice, undignified sneers and growls, then retire until tonight when they will attempt to make good the threats they have been hurling at each other for nearly two months.

The referee, the man on whose judgment the outcome will hinge in the event the encounter goes the full 15 rounds, will be named at the ringside by Abe Greene, Jersey boxing commissioner. There will be no judges—but also probably no decision. A knock-out seems inevitable.

The betting was a fluctuating 9 to 5 and 8 to 5 on Galento to win and still even money that Baer will quit or be knocked out. Despite the fact that Galento concluded his training by losing a decision to one of his brothers in a tavern brawl, and will enter the ring with an improvised chin clef. The younger Galento neglected to disarm himself of a loaded beer glass before he started punching.

But the cut was regarded as superficial and in no wise likely to prove detrimental to Galento. He rarely ever leads his chin anyway, his best punches being a left out of bounds and a skull to the face.

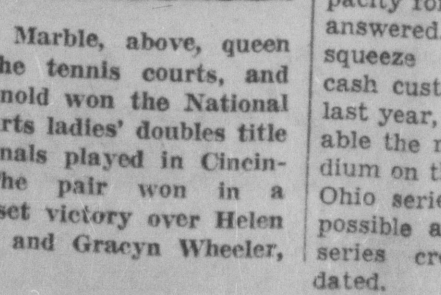

Few could see any possible chance of this bout, which will be held in gigantic Roosevelt Stadium for the championship of the strait jacket department, lasting more than half of the intended distance. We like Galento, too, in this one, not because he can fight, but because Baer probably won't.

Nor has the former heavyweight champion ever encountered the likes of the man-handling he will receive tonight, unless he walks out there and becomes boss of the situation right from the first pitch. Before it is over—assuming it will last seven or eight rounds—he will be gouged, elbowed, kneed, possibly hit low and undoubtedly butted like a man fighting a herd of goats.

This little party is right in the heart of that section revered in song and story as Galento territory, and, after all, he doesn't mean any harm when he inadvertently drops a punch down around an opponent's instep and fungoes him on a line drive into some adjacent vacant lot.

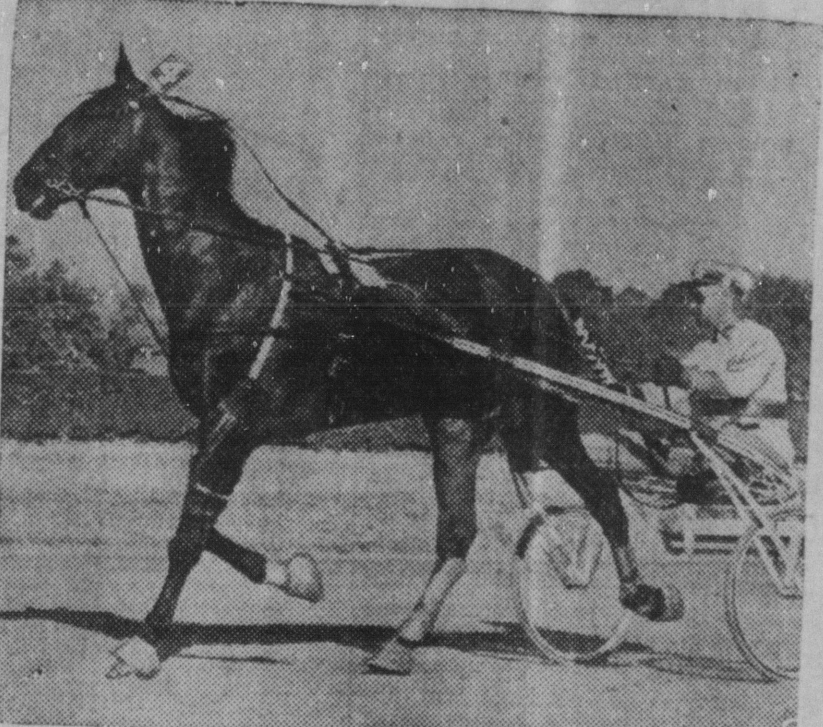

Baer has been thinking all this over in his own keenly imaginative way. Although he insists that he is qualified for a knock-down-and-dragout by virtue of his 20-rounder with Paulino Uzcudun in 1931, he can't be looking forward to the festivities this evening with any great enthusiasm. Baer admittedly is sensitive about getting his profile disarranged, and he must know that Paulino was the essence of gentility in the ring compared with the Two-Ton Tarzan, especially when the latter is doing his yodeling in his own privately posted little jungle.

Ohioans See Possibility Of Series In Home State

COLUMBUS, July 1 — As Fourth of July week opened with the Cleveland Indians and the Cincinnati Reds tenaciously hanging on to slim leads in their respective leagues, optimistic Ohio baseball fans began to hope for something they have dreamed of but never experienced—an All-Ohio World Series.

It has long been a baseball axiom that the team in first place on Independence Day is the team that will cop the pennant. It may have been disproved time and again, but nevertheless it still is the credo of avid baseball followers.

Of course, it is quite possible that Thursday may dawn with some other teams in the drivers' seats. As of this morning, Cincinnati was only one and one-half games ahead of Brooklyn and Cleveland only two games ahead of Detroit. The wrong kind of breaks the next few days may change the picture entirely and make All-Ohio World Series talk seem as silly as chatter about a European peace conference.

Albeit, it cannot be gainsaid that the Ohio teams are at the top of the heap today. Or that this is Fourth of July Week. And on the credit side of the ledger, it may be pointed out that neither squad shows the slightest sign of cracking under the strain of leadership. On the contrary, both outfits, and Cincinnati in particular, hope to improve as the season goes on, particularly in regard to team batting. The Reds to date have been woefully weak at the platter, at present being sixth in team batting with a mark of only .259. They owe their present exalted position to swell hurling, even better fielding—they lead the loop with a .982 fielding mark—and a phenomenal will to win.

Indians Hit Better
The Indians, doing considerably better with their stick-work—they're in third place with a .276 average—expect to continue on their merry way now that the controversy revolving around Manager Oscar Vitt has been relegated to the junk-heap. Their .977 fielding mark places them second in that category.

There isn't a baseball fan in the state who wouldn't break a leg to see an all-Ohio series. It stacks up as a natural, both from the standpoint of the spectator and the box office.

The only comparable event in baseball annals would be the famed "subway series" between the New York Yankees and the New York Giants—always highly successful shindigs from all accounts. Since 1900, when the American League was founded, there have been five such nickel series—in 1921, 1922, 1923, 1936 and 1937.

The National League club won honors in 1921 and 1922, with the Yankees collecting the long end of the gate receipts in 1923 and again in 1936 and 1937, when they started their record of four straight world series wins.

The Reds garnered their only pennants in 1919, when they went on to take the infamous "scandal series" from the Chicago club, five games to three; and last year, when they dropped four straight to the Yankees.

Cleveland captured its only bunting in 1920—missing contact with the 1919 Reds by one year—and went on to take the World Series from Brooklyn, five games to two.

Stadium Available
Even the question of seating capacity for an Ohio series has been answered. Cincinnati managed to squeeze a profitable number of cash customers into Crosley Field last year, and Cleveland has available the mammoth Municipal Stadium on the lake, where, should an Ohio series come off, it is quite possible an all-time record world series crowd would be accommodated.

TWO SLAUGHTER HOMERS BUMP REDLEG OUTFIT

Enos Hits Hard; Derringer Hurls Tonight; Red Sox Continue Slide

ST. LOUIS, July 2—The Cincinnati Reds, "slaughtered" 3 to 2 yesterday by the St. Louis Cardinals in a game that whittled their first place margin to one-half game, were to rely tonight on Paul Derringer to gain revenge on the Gas House Gang.

It was a pair of booming circuit blows from the bat of Enos Slaughter that spelled defeat for the Reds. He clouted one in the third canto with a mate aboard, and repeated his feat in the fifth to account for all the Card runs.

Batting against the seven-hit hurling of Lon Warneke, the Reds shoved across one in the first and one in the eighth. The Cards got only five hits from Moore and Hutchings, who took over in the seventh when Moore was lifted for a pinch-hitter.

Derringer will be after his 10th victory when he walks to the mound, with Fiddler Bill McGee opposing him.

Continued to deflate today, mainly because the Red Sox pitchers' ineffectiveness in fogging 'em past the enemy batsmen.

Earlier, the Red Sox maintained a fast pace to lead the American League race but, even then, it was their heavy-hitting artillery and not their hurlers that kept the club on top. Now there is a decline in the team's hitting, but even after such a slump is ended, little hope is being held for the Sox to capture the flag.

Yesterday the Cronin clubbers dropped their 11th decision in the last 16 starts, this time to the hapless Philadelphia Athletics, 9 to 1. The usually banjo-hitting A's pasted two pitchers for 15 hits, including two homers by Cather Frank Hayes.

The Detroit Tigers stayed right in the thick of the pennant battle by downing the Chicago White Sox, 3 to 1. Buck Newsom received credit for the win, his eleventh straight against one loss this season.

Aided by five errors, the New York Yankees had little trouble hurdling the Washington Senators, 8 to 4. Veteran Red Ruffing handled the pitching task and Joe DiMaggio and George Selkirk helped out with homers.

Bobby Bragan's error enabled the Brooklyn Dodgers to nose out the Philadelphia Phillies, 4 to 3, and the third-place New York Giants rolled up an easy 7 to 1 triumph over the Boston Bees. Claude Passeau walked Pinch-hitter Paul Waner in the tenth inning to force over the winning run as the Pittsburgh Pirates gained a 4 to 3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

PERRONI WANTS ANOTHER PUNCH AT OHIO CHAMP

COLUMBUS, July 2—Patsy Perroni, Canton heavyweight boxer who last night punched out a fancy 10-round win over Eddie Winston, Giant Hartford, Conn. Negro, today was eager for another crack at the Ohio heavyweight title of Jack "Buddy" Walker, the nation's tenth ranking fighter.

Perroni's margin of victory over Winston was not great, but it was decisive. The Canton "fancy Dan," who carried lighter guns than his 198-pound opponent, danced and jabbed his way to win five rounds. Three other cantos went to Winston while two were even. Perroni weighed in at 185.

It was the third and rubber match between the two, each talking a previous battle in the East. Due to his victory, Perroni will be awarded another crack at Walker, whom he held to a draw in April for the only blot on the Columbus Negro's escutcheon.

COLUMBUS, July 2—Jesse Newman, St. Paul first baseman, was fined $25 and costs today by American Association President George M. Demps Proves That He Can Still Heave Fists

ATLANTA, Ga., July 2—It may not have been the battle of the century, but to the 12,000 to 15,000 persons who sat in Atlanta's baseball park last night and saw 45-year-old Jack Dempsey punch a hefty wrestler into bloody submission in something less than five minutes, it was a revelation.

Jack Dempsey still is one of the hardest hitting fighting men in the world. There was no doubt of this today in the mind of anyone who got a closeup of Clarence ("Cowboy") Luttrell, the Texas bad-boy wrestler-fighter, as he was counted out in one minute, 58 seconds of the second round.

Just why the fight was arranged—throwing a supposedly clumsy old former heavyweight champion against a 34-year-old fat man who earns his living grunting and growling around the southern wrestling circuit—probably no one but the principals ever will know. But it did answer one big question that has been popping around in fight circles for years—can Dempsey still fight?

He can. Regardless of his age, regardless of his bulging waistline, regardless of his long retirement, Dempsey last night proved himself an extremely dangerous man with his fists—at least for a couple of rounds.

Scheduled For Ten
The fight was scheduled for ten rounds. It hadn't gone one minute before everyone in the park knew it wouldn't last more than two rounds—the distance Dempsey had predicted.

Dempsey rushed Luttrell right from the start. His aging legs carried him across the ring with amazing speed. He pounded Luttrell with both hands, flush to the head and with hammerlike force to the body. The cowboy swung wildly now and again, but never had a chance to launch anything resembling an attack. He was a puffing, battered man when the bell ended the first round.

In the second, Dempsey—the killer Dempsey of old—sailed in. Mercilessly, he poured lefts and rights to Luttrell's head and the cowboy went down for an eight count, then down again.

Finally, Luttrell, dazed, bloody and probably unseeing, walked into a terrific left hook that caught him full on the chin and he bowled through the ropes to land unconscious under the press table. He was so badly hurt he was rushed to a hospital, where he remained completely out for more than an hour.

Dempsey, puffing only slightly, said after the fight he had "no immediate plans for the future." Questions regarding rumors he might essay a serious comeback went unanswered.

RED BIRDS DROP 17-INNING FRAY TO INDIANS, 5-4

COLUMBUS, July 2 — Kansas City today had climbed back into a virtual first-place tie with Minneapolis in the American Association, nosing out Milwaukee, 3 to 2, while the Millers remained idle. However, Minneapolis still possesses a first-place margin of five percentage points.

The Blues shoved over two runs in the seventh to take the measure of Milwaukee, now in third place but 12 games behind the co-leaders.

The other two games yesterday were settled by one-run margins, with the Columbus tilt at Indianapolis going 17 innings. The Indians took the 5 to 4 decision when Red Bird hurler Harry Brecheen, who had gone all the way, hurled a double-play ball into center field and allowed the winning run to score. The second scheduled game was called at the end of the second with the score knotted at 2-all.

A ninth inning single by Chet Morgan drove in the winning run as Louisville eked out a 3 to 2 win over the cellar-dwelling Toledo Mudhens.

HEROES AND GOATS
HEROES — Frank Hayes, Philadelphia catcher, who clouted two homers as the Athletics stopped the Boston Red Sox; Enos Slaughter, St. Louis outfielder, whose two homers gave his team a victory.

GOATS — Bob Bragan, Phillies infielder, whose fumble allowed the Brooklyn Dodgers to score the winning run; Claude Passeau, Chicago Cubs pitcher, who issued a walk in the 10th inning, forcing across the winning Pittsburgh run.

PRESENT FARM PROBLEM

AGRICULTURE in this country does not need to repeat past mistakes.

"Never have the farmers of the United States been in such good position to produce the limit with the minimum of labor," said Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in a recent discussion of current problems. "Both our soils and our methods of agricultural management have greatly improved. Because of our organization, our agricultural efficiency, and our great supplies, we will not need to plow the hills and the great plains as we did in 1917 and 1918."

There is a growing problem which must be handled with foresight and efficiency. That is the problem of our rapidly diminishing markets. The mounting conquests of the totalitarian regimes have curtailed our foreign outlets for farm products. The Mediterranean area, the Scandinavian lands, Central Europe, the Low Countries and the Balkans are all closed markets at the present time and may remain so indefinitely.

At the same time, there is a great and growing need for our vast food supplies. There is our own under-fed population. There is also the horde of refugees and the populations of the war-stricken and war-fearing lands mentioned above.

"We have plenty," said Mr. Wallace, "for our own people, plenty for war relief, and plenty for reserves. Our present problem is one of getting the food we have to the people who need it, both here and abroad."

A people of enterprise and good will should be able to solve this, now that we are awake to the world's needs and perils.

HITLER LOOKS AT BRAZIL

WASHINGTON—How vigorously Nazi Germany is trying to undermine the United States in Latin America is illustrated by a secret arms offer Hitler has just made to sell $60,000,000 worth of the latest military weapons to Brazil.

This would include tanks, artillery, flame-throwers, bombing planes and other modern devices with which Germany prostrated France—all transported to a hemisphere where Pan-American nations have been relatively at peace for half a century.

Furthermore, Germany guarantees to deliver the goods almost immediately—via Italian ships. This indicates how sure Hitler is of conquering England. He can sell his arms almost before the British attack starts.

It now looks very much as if Brazil would accept the offer.

State Department officials, together with General George Marshall, dynamic U. S. Chief of Staff, are pulling every possible wire to prevent the purchase, but they are having a hard time. They are offering to sell American military equipment instead. However, the Brazilians point out that because of cheap Nazi wages it would take $200,000,000 to buy the same material here where costs are much higher. Furthermore, Hitler is willing to accept coffee and other Brazilian surplus products in a barter deal. No real cash is involved.

Finally, the Brazilians say they bought some artillery from the United States recently, but it was World War stuff, and they had to spend $8,000 for repairs on each gun. The German munitions, on the other hand, are virtually new.

General Marshall made a special flight to Brazil last year to get acquainted with the Brazilian Army, and later piloted General Goes Monteiro, Brazilian Chief of Staff, all over the United States. However, all this goodwill doesn't seem to count today. At least 40 percent of the Brazilian Army is reported to be pro-Nazi.

NOTE—Meanwhile the State Department moves with tragic slowness to counteract Nazi activity in South America. Three years ago it set up a Cultural Relations Bureau to cultivate Latin America, but its activity to date is minus zero.

DIET AND HEALTH

Get In the Swim

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SWIMMING is accepted as the best form of all-round exercise. For the non-professional athlete, it has many advantages. There is no strain on the feet and it, therefore, appeals to many who cannot play golf, tennis or go on walking tours on account of flatfoot, arthritis or other pedal disability. And swimming exercises practically every muscle of the body.

Beware Infections

Swimming has some health hazards of its own. One that is constantly debated is the possibility of nose and ear infections. These are generally blamed on dirty and contaminated water—pools, springs, lakes or rivers—but Dr. H. Marshall Taylor, of Jacksonville, Florida, has been calling our attention to other mechanisms. Dr. Taylor had a number of patients with sinusitis and ears infected as a result of swimming, in which contaminated water could hardly have been a factor, because they frequented a swimming pool fed by a spring having a flow in excess of 145,000 gallons of fresh water a minute. These pools had a very low bacteria count, and they contained no irritating chemicals.

We're Landlubbers

The other factors which bring about these infections are structural in man's anatomy. Man is not adapted to an aquatic existence. As in all air-breathing animals, the epithelial cells which line the nose are admirably adapted to resisting airborne infection, but are not capable of dealing with water-borne infection. Air-breathing animals who lead a semi-aquatic existence, according to Dr. Taylor's extensive studies, are capable of closing the nose and ears while under water, and so protect their respiratory mucous membranes. The alligator has a muscle around the openings of the nose so that they can be closed while he is under water. Semi-aquatic birds have no nostrils—the pelican and the cormorant.

The hippopotamus is a mammal, like man, but unlike man an aquatic mammal and its underwater mechanism is perfect. Did you ever see a hippopotamus with sinus trouble? No, and you never will! The reason is the nostrils of the hippopotamus are a pair of slits which can be opened and closed by the action of circular muscles surrounding them. They close when the hippopotamus submerges.

Breathing Protects

The lesson is that the protection you have against respiratory infection under water consists in proper breathing—exhale through the nose while under water and inhale through the mouth while swimming on the surface and you maintain a positive air pressure in the nasal cavities which protects the nose and ears from infection.

Use Ear Drums

Aquatic animals also have means of closing the ears under water. We can imitate this by using ear drums, but this is of less importance because ear infections from swimming come almost exclusively from nose and throat infection, which invades the ear by going up the Eustachian tube.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. B.—"Will you please tell me whether using fresh lemons diluted with water for a rinse after shampooing my hair will do any harm to it? It is blonde and I would like to keep it that way."

Answer—On the contrary, it is generally considered that a lemon rinse is a good thing after a shampoo. I have no reason to believe that it will change the color of the hair.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York model agency, starts to rebuild her romance with RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "swung his way to fame on a trumpet," but SARAH MARKLEY, wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself. Meanwhile, ROBERT BARTON, young engineer who lives in the apartment above, strikes up a friendship with Linda.

YESTERDAY: Linda has lunch with Ronnie, who treats her in the same endearing way he used to do. Later, when Robert comes to take her to Sarah Markley's party, he tells Linda he saw Sarah's name in a gossip column.

CHAPTER FOUR

LINDA reached for her evening wrap, thinking intently about Robert Barton's words. So Sarah Markley's role as a breaker of hearts was well known. And Robert's family knew her and had suggested he call her. Therefore, somewhere his social sphere and Sarah's must meet.

But that was not important. She wanted to see the evening paper and find out how far Sarah had gone in her attempt to annex Ronald.

"I've a paper along," Robert said, and drew it from his overcoat pocket. "Here—just a few lines."

Linda read them.

"Sarah Markley, most dazzling member of last season's glamor crew, is conferring all her favors on a young man with a horn. The young man—and plenty of debs have their eyes on him—is Ronald Stafford, who is featured in Sarah's father's new music hit, due to open next week."

"It says that she likes him, but not that he likes her," Linda heard her voice saying out loud quite as though the man weren't there.

He chuckled and his eyes were teasing. "And you, I gather, know the young man." His voice waited, though, quite as if it wanted a negative answer.

"Down in Hamilton, Va., where we both grew up, I used to play the piano for him at recitals. That was when his temper was making all the neighbors jittery but I thought it was beautiful!"

He nodded, not answering, and all the way to the Markley residence, in one of the whitest, largest apartment houses on Park avenue, he chatted of trivial things. But when they were entering the private lift to be carried to the penthouse, he put his hand impulsively over Linda's.

"I'm sticking around if you need a champion," he said. Linda left her wrap in the luxuriously furnished dressing room, whose mirrored walls reflected slim, svelte women of all ages who were powdering their noses, putting a braver red on their lips. Suddenly she was eager to get away from them, to be back with Robert. She did not want Ronald to see her alone in the group of women who so plainly belonged. She was grateful that Robert was waiting for her near the entrance, just outside.

The drawing room was long wide surrounded by a terrace on three sides. On the other a long vista of other rooms appeared. A long balcony at one side led to a long balcony and other steps beyond it went to other floors.

So this was Sarah's setting. Sarah, herself, in white satin, moved gracefully among her guests.

"We should make ourselves known," Linda murmured to Robert.

His eyes were amused. "Let's get it over with. The girl in ethereal

Sarah spoke to Linda. "Do I know you?" she asked.

radiance, I take it, is the vampire. She's coming to meet us."

"Not to meet us, to meet you," Linda murmured, noting that Sarah's eyes were on the man.

Sarah spoke to Linda. "Do I know you?" she asked. Then she turned to Robert. "I'm positive I don't know you." Her smile was dazzling.

Linda spoke coolly, slowly, explaining who she was, mentioning Robert's name.

"Oh, of course. How stupid of me," Sarah said then. "You know Ronnie. Now I remember. He's around somewhere. But you're the Robert Barton—Rob Barton, everyone I know who knows you calls you. I heard you were doing a construction job in town this winter. And you haven't let us be nice to you."

But her eyes said, "The gates to Paradise were open and you haven't knocked!"

"I'm busy most of the time," Robert answered casually. "I got out of the social routine when I went in for engineering. But I let Linda coax me out of my hole tonight."

He said it carelessly, but Linda understood. He was trying to tell Sarah that he knew Linda, had had time for her. Her eyes met his, and impulsively Robert's crinkled into laughter and she smiled, too. She had helped him out last night and he was helping her tonight, she reminded herself. But it was more than that which was in the smile. Mysteriously, she had met this tall young stranger. Oddly enough, he was working into her pattern.

Then she saw Ronald coming, his yellow head held high, his blue eyes steady and merry, meeting her own. She wished that Sarah would slip her arm through Robert's and lead him away. She wanted to be alone with Ronnie for a moment—just an interlude to tell him that the flowers were beautiful.

His quick eyes saw them, smiled appreciation. His hand clasp was vital and strong as he was introduced to Robert. The two men got along easily enough. It was Sarah whose smooth white brow was puzzled.

It was through Ronald's arm

that Sarah slipped a white hand on which gleamed a huge, square-cut emerald, set in a band of sapphires.

"Come on, Ronnie. We have to great people."

"I'll join you in a minute," he said. "Mind if I steal Linda a minute, Barton? We have a year to catch up with."

So in the end Linda stood on a balcony that swung close to the stars and Ronald kissed her again.

Down below there were scattered lights where taxicabs crept through dark streets and shining ones. Far across the river other lights swung like lanterns up the hills.

"You're sweet, Lin," Ronald was saying. "And I've found you. Don't get lost from me again, will you, honey?"

Don't get lost. . . . But she hadn't been. It was Ronald who had gone away. Was it always the man who wandered? Who followed a singing wind somewhere? But we come back, Robert Barton had said. Did men always come back? Did they stay for a little while or tarry forever?

Standing on the windy balcony, with the violet mist of her frock blowing around her knees, and the green orchids on her shoulder she had a sudden fear. When Ronald kissed her again she clung to him a second.

"I love you," he said, and then as quickly reached for her hand. "Come on, honey, that's my hand starting and I'm not there."

"I'll join you in a second," she answered, releasing her hand. "Run along, Ronnie."

"All right," he smiled. "Don't forget what I said."

She turned back to watch the stars. They were so close she had a silly desire to stretch tall, to reach up and up and up and pluck one. She laughed softly. Maybe there was always a night in one's life when the stars came down.

A cool voice made her turn around. Sarah was standing near and her blue eyes were dark with anger.

"I take it that you are trying to land Ronald," she said.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

HENRY FORD'S announcement of his plant's ability to produce 1,000 airplanes daily for Uncle Sam's defensive purposes at first was regarded with a deal of skepticism both by unofficial and by most professional critics. However, William S. Knudsen, our nation's new production dictator, accepted the flivver wizard's offer seriously from the very minute when the manufacturer proclaimed it.

Ever since the early days of the last World War, when Ford undertook to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas" and failed to do it, the public has tended to regard him as somewhat inclined to over-promise himself in such situations.

Knudsen, however, who learned the rudiments of mass production while working for Ford, knew better. Later, when Bill identified himself with General Motors' Chevrolet subsidiary, it became his job to compete with his ex-boss in the wholesale turning out of autos in the lower price range, and presently he developed into as great a genius as at his original preceptor. In fact, rivalry between the two spurred mass production's growth up to what it is today.

Knudsen very readily sees the difference between "getting the boys out of the trenches by Christmas" and keying up plane-manufacture of a 1,000 daily rate in short order. He may still be a bit doubtful of the former program's practicability but his own experience tells him that the latter is a perfect feasibility with Henry Ford in charge of it.

Generally speaking, Bill Knudsen probably is somewhat more of a realist than Henry is, but he's plenty astute enough to give Henry full credit for understanding what he's talking about on the subject of mass production.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

Congress recent warning to the world that the United States won't tolerate any overseas powers' grabs of island or mainland footholds in western hemispherical waters or on our western hemispherical ocean front, of course, wasn't intended as a warning to anybody but the totalitarian nations.

Nobody anticipates any such attempted grabs except by Germany and possibly Italy, of such western hemispherical possessions of whatever European countries they may be able to vanquish on their own side of the Atlantic.

That is to say, congress means British, French, Dutch and Danish holdings on the New World's coast or in its vicinity. They can stay British, French, Dutch or Danish, but nobody else, except Uncle Sam can have 'em. That's the purport of what's known as the Pittman-Bloom resolution, just adopted on Capitol Hill.

Chairman Key Pittman and Sol Bloom, respectively of the senatorial and representatives' foreign relations committees, are the resolution's authors. Pittman's name precedes Sol's because Key is a senator. The fact is, nevertheless, that Sol Bloom is better acquainted with foreign affairs than any other half dozen members of both houses of congress. He acquired his information by travels all over Europe, and acquaintanceship with Europe's present "big men" before they'd graduated into leadership. He was quite a buddy of Mussolini. He knew Hitler when Adolf was a peewee. He doesn't like 'em any more, but he has "their numbers."

He once told me, "I haven't much schooling, but I've had a lot of education." That's how he rates as a foreign expert. He doesn't profess to be much of a theorist, but (gosh!) he's practical.

PROTECTIVE CUSTODY

Herr Hitler did one of the brightest things in his life, when, the Germans having occupied Paris, he refrained from putting William C. Bullitt, our ambassador there, into "protective custody."

Bill simply loves the limelight. His notion was, virtually, to take over the French government's functions, when the Nazis took possession of the capital. Then the story was broadcast that the German command had, to put it mildly, arrested him.

The Nazis denied it, but the U. S. embassy didn't—though it could, if it had chosen to do so. If it had been true it would have been grand advertising for William. It was a cinch that Herr Hitler wouldn't have permitted any harm to befall him. But the publicity he'd have had out of it would have been something to write home about.

Herr Hitler, though, was too crafty to permit him to capitalize what would have been his great opportunity—if Adolf had co-operated with him.

So Bill remains merely a member of one of the first families of Philadelphia.

he's dying to know how often, during his armistice conference with Herr Hitler, Mussolini up and said: "Yes, boss!"

As in all air-breathing animals, the epithelial cells which line the nose are admirably adapted to resisting air-borne infection, but are not capable of dealing with water-borne infection.

Air-breathing animals have a semi-aquatic existence, according to Dr. Taylor's extensive studies, are capable of closing the nose and ears while under water, and so protect their respiratory mucous membranes. The alligator has a muscle around the openings of the nose so that they can be closed while he is under water. Semi-aquatic birds have no nostrils—the pelican and the cormorant.

The hippopotamus is a mammal, like man, but unlike man an aquatic mammal and its underwater mechanism is perfect. Did you ever see a hippopotamus with sinus trouble? No, and you never will! The reason is the nostrils of the hippopotamus are a pair of slits which can be opened and closed by the action of circular muscles surrounding them. They close when the hippopotamus submerges.

Breathing Protects

The lesson is that the protection you have against respiratory infection under water consists in proper breathing—exhale through the nose while under water and inhale through the mouth while swimming on the surface and you maintain a positive air pressure in the nasal cavities which protects the nose and ears from infection.

Use Ear Drums

Aquatic animals also have means of closing the ears under water. We can imitate this by using ear drums, but this is of less importance because ear infections from swimming come almost exclusively from nose and throat infection, which invades the ear by going up the Eustachian tube.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mrs. B.—"Will you please tell me whether using fresh lemons diluted with water for a rinse after shampooing my hair will do any harm to it? It is blonde and I would like to keep it that way."

Answer—On the contrary, it is generally considered that a lemon rinse is a good thing after a shampoo. I have no reason to believe that it will change the color of the hair.

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
LINDA AVERY, receptionist at a New York models' agency, starts to re-build her romance with RONALD STAFFORD, her childhood sweetheart, who has "swung his way to fame on a trumpet," but SARAH MARKLEY, wealthy glamor girl, is trying to capture Ronald for herself. Meanwhile ROBERT BARTON, young engineer who lives in the apartment above, strikes up a friendship with Linda.

YESTERDAY: Linda has lunch with Ronnie, who treats her in the same endearing way he used to do. Later, when Robert comes to take her to Sarah Markley's party, he tells Linda he saw Sarah's name in a gossip column.

CHAPTER FOUR

LINDA reached for her evening wrap, thinking intently about Robert Barton's words. So Sarah Markley's role as a breaker of hearts was well known. And Robert's family knew her and had suggested he call her. Therefore, somewhere his social sphere and Sarah's must meet.

But that was not important. She wanted to see the evening paper and find out how far Sarah had gone in her attempt to annex Ronald.

"I've a paper along," Robert said, and drew it from his overcoat pocket. "Here—just a few liner." Linda read them.

"Sarah Markley, most dazzling member of last season's glamor crew, is conferring all her favors on a young man with a horn. The young man—and plenty of debts have their eyes on him—is Ronald Stafford, who is featured in Sarah's father's new music hit, due to open next week."

"It says that she likes him, but not that he likes her," Linda heard her voice saying out loud quite as though the man weren't there.

He chuckled and his eyes were teasing. "And you, I gather, know the young man." His voice waited, though, quite as if it wanted a negative answer.

"Down in Hamilton, Va., where we both grew up, I used to play the piano for him at recitals. That was when his trumpet was making all the neighbors jittery but I thought it was beautiful!"

He nodded, not answering, and all the way to the Markley residence, in one of the whitest, largest apartment houses on Park avenue, he chatted of trivial things. But when they were entering the private lift to be carried to the penthouse, he put his hand impulsively over Linda's.

"I'm sticking around if you need a champion," he said. Linda left her wrap in the luxuriously furnished dressing room, whose mirrored walls reflected slim, evile women of all ages who were powdering their noses, putting a braver red on their lips. Suddenly she was eager to get away from them, to be back with Robert. She did not want Ronald to see her alone in the group of women who so plainly belonged. She was grateful that Robert was waiting for her near the entrance, just outside.

The drawing room was long wide surrounded by a terrace on three sides. On the other a long vista of other rooms appeared. A curving staircase at one side led to a long balcony and other steps beyond it went to other floors.

So this was Sarah's setting. Sarah, herself, in white satin, moved gracefully among her guests.

"We should make ourselves known," Linda murmured to Robert.

His eyes were amused. "Let's get it over with. The girl in ethereal

Sarah spoke to Linda. "Do I know you?" she asked.

radiance, I take it, is the vampire. She's coming to meet us."

"Not to meet us, to meet you," Linda murmured, noting that Sarah's eyes were on the man.

Sarah spoke to Linda. "Do I know you?" she asked. Then she turned to Robert. "I'm positive I don't know you." Her smile was dazzling.

Linda spoke coolly, slowly, explaining who she was, mentioning Robert's name.

"Oh, of course. How stupid of me," Sarah said then. "You know Ronnie. Now I remember. He's around somewhere. But you're the Robert Barton—Rob Barton, everyone I know who knows you calls you. I heard you were doing a construction job in town this winter. And you haven't let us be nice to you."

But her eyes said, "The gates to Paradise were open and you haven't knocked!" "I'm busy most of the time," Robert answered casually. "I got out of the social routine when I went in for engineering. But I let Linda coax me out of my hole tonight."

He said it carelessly, but Linda understood. He was trying to tell Sarah that he knew Linda, had had time for her. Her eyes met his, and impulsively Robert's crinkled into laughter and she smiled, too. She had helped him out last night and he was helping her tonight, she reminded herself. But it was more than that which was in the smile. Mysteriously, she had met this tall young stranger. Oddly enough, he was working into her pattern.

Then she saw Ronald coming, his yellow head held high, his blue eyes, steady and merry, meeting her own. She wished that Sarah would slip her arm through Robert's and lead him away. She wanted to be alone with Ronnie for a moment—just an interlude to tell him that the flowers were beautiful. His quick eyes saw them, smiled appreciation. His hand clasp was vital and strong as he was introduced to Robert. The two men got along smoothly enough. It was Sarah whose smooth white brow was puzzled.

It was through Ronald's arm

that Sarah slipped a white hand on which gleamed a huge, square-cut emerald, set in a band of sapphires.

"Come on, Ronnie. We have to greet people."

"I'll join you in a minute," he said. "Mind if I steal Linda a minute, Barton? We have a year to catch up with."

So in the end Linda stood on a balcony that swung close to the stars and Ronald kissed her again. Down below there were scattered lights where taxicabs crept through dark streets and shining ones. Far across the river other lights swung like lanterns up the hills.

"You're sweet, Lin," Ronald was saying. "And I've found you. Don't get lost from me again, will you, honey?"

Don't get lost. . . . But she hadn't been. It was Ronald who had gone away. Was it always the man who wandered? Who followed a singing wind somewhere? But we come back, Robert Barton had said. Did men always come back? Did they stay for a little while or tarry forever?

Standing on the windy balcony, with the violet mist of her frock blowing around her knees, and the green orchids on her shoulder she had a sudden fear. When Ronald kissed her again she clung to him a second.

"I love you," he said, and then as quickly reached for her hand. "Come on, honey, that's my hand starting and I'm not there."

"I'll join you in a second," she answered, releasing her hand. "Run along, Ronnie."

"All right," he smiled. "Don't forget what I said."

She turned back to watch the stars. They were so close she had a silly desire to stretch tall, to reach up and up and up and pluck one. She laughed softly. Maybe there was always a night in one's life when the stars came down.

A cool voice made her turn around. Sarah was standing near and her blue eyes were dark with anger.

"I take it that you are trying to land Ronald," she said.

W. S. Dunkel Quits Post as Infirmary Superintendent

Commissioners, Given Notice Monday, Plan Examination For Successor

WIFE'S HEALTH CITED

Monthly Salaries of $85 And $45 Plus Board Provided By County

Wilson S. Dunkel, superintendent of the Pickaway County Home, will resign August 1.

His resignation, submitted to the County Commissioners at their meeting Monday afternoon, read as follows: "I hereby tender my resignation as superintendent of the Pickaway County Home, effective August 1, 1940."

Superintendent Dunkel told the commissioners that the ill health of his wife had prompted him to give up his position as superintendent of the Home and return to his 124-acre farm in Washington Township.

Commissioners said a Civil Service examination will be held in the near future in order that the vacancy may be filled. At the present they stated they have no one in mind for the position.

Dunkel began his work as superintendent and his wife as matron of the home last August 1, following the death of H. E. Mowery, who had held the position for nearly 20 years. Dunkel said that he enjoyed his work with the 40 inmates and would like to have stayed had his wife's ill health not interfered.

The superintendent of the home receives a monthly salary of $85 and the matron $45, besides their room and board. Other employees of the home include a cook, a farm hand and a fireman.

TOKYO, July 2 — Carrying about 100 Americans from Hong Kong, the United States liner President Coolidge sailed for Manila today.

Fears had been expressed of a possible Japanese attack against Hong Kong.

Overcoats for Emergency Army

Possibility Of Soviet, German Conflict Seen

WASHINGTON, July 2—A belief that Joseph Stalin, wily Georgian who sits in Moscow's Kremlin, is giving Fuehrer Adolf Hitler more to worry about than he cares publicly to admit was held today in extremely well-informed diplomatic quarters.

More bluntly stated, Washington finds reason to believe that Soviet Russia's push into Rumania is not merely an opportunistic territorial grab, but also—perhaps primarily—a strategic move to square itself for combat with Germany. The Red army now is able to execute a flanking movement from south of the Reich, coordinated with an advance to the southwest from the tip of Lithuania.

Observers do not believe that Russia wants to fight Germany. But, it can now be revealed, as long as 10 days ago Washington heard reports that the Reich might strike at the Soviet Union, even before invading Great Britain. If such reports reached America, they surely fell on the sensitive ears of Stalin's widespread secret service. Preparedness measures would have been obviously indicated to the ruler of Russia.

With the Red army now poised in both Bessarabia and Lithuania, it is in a position to execute an effective pincers movement, if German forces should be thrown through Poland in a formal attack on Soviet Russia.

According to information received, Hitler was convinced that he could dispose of both Russia and Britain before the snows of winter brought military activity to a standstill. Nazi military advisers, it was understood, had not yet decided which to attack first.

VALLEE PLAYS FOSTER

Stephen Foster, one of America's best loved composers who was born on the 50th anniversary of signing of the Declaration of Independence will be the subject of Rudy Vallee's Fourth of July program Thursday, at 9:00 p. m. when Vallee, with an all-Southern cast, tells the stories of and sings the songs that made Foster immortal.

With Tennessee's own Dinah Shore playing "Jeannie," the woman who inspired Foster to write "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair," Vallee will be assisted by colored comedian Eddie Green and the Four Inkspots, one of the best colored quartets in radio today. Charlie Cantor, heretofore heard on the Fred Allen show, will also appear on the Vallee program. Other Foster music scheduled for July 4 will be "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River," "O Susannah," course, conjectural, but Washington officials consider it highly significant that he moved into both the Baltic states and Rumania just when he did. He has had nine months to take whatever spoils may have been agreed on at the Molotov-Von Ribbentrop conference just preceding the war, but has waited until this particular moment to act.

"Camp Town Faces," and "My Old Kentucky Home."

PEARCE SATIRE

Al Pearce and his cast will satirize "Rebecca" on the program for Friday, July 5, at 6:30 p. m. Carl Hoff's orchestra will provide the musical background.

BLONDIE IN POLITICS

Blondie dabbles in politics Monday at 6:30 p. m. over CBS. Blondie's venture into politics is the result of the political broadcasts she and Dagwood have been staying up late to hear. Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake will be starred in the radio version of Chic Young's famous comic strip characters.

RADIO BRIEFS

Drew Pearson and Robert Allen, Washington columnists, will introduce a new series of broadcasts over NBC-Blue network on Mondays at 7:30 p. m. beginning July 8.

George McCall and his "Man About Hollywood" commentary returns to CBS July 5. He will be heard for fifteen minutes of the vacated Kate Smith hour for the summer stanza. Lud Gluskin's music and vocalists will also be heard on the show.

It is reported that Bob Hope is asking for a hundred percent increase in salary from his present sponsor. Both the sponsor and agency have refused the proposal according to last minute information.

Dan Golenpaul, owner of "Information Please" has announced that the show will open for new sponsorship beginning November 15. Lump sum of $8500 is the asking price.

Because of the tremendous success scored by Bert Wheeler and his stooge, Hank Ladd, in Earl Carroll's latest Hollywood show, agencies and sponsors are after platters in an effort to land the show. Records were made by Wheeler and Ladd this week and shipped East for sponsor approval.

For his broadcast July 3, Kenny Baker will sing the Woodpecker Song, "Make Believe Island" and a Hawaiian medley.

NAZI PRISONERS IN CANADA FOR WAR'S DURATION

MONTREAL, July 2—The first batch of German prisoners, minus one of their number who committed suicide by diving through a porthole, were interned in a Canadian prison camp today far from the battlefields of France where they were captured by the British.

The prisoners, their exact number a military secret, arrived at Montreal yesterday aboard a British prison ship. They were sent to Canada to lessen "fifth column" activity and to preclude their becoming auxiliaries to any Nazi troops which may land in England when the long expected German blitzkrieg begins.

Few of the prisoners concealed their hostile feelings as they left the boat under the guns of 250 British officers and soldiers who stood guard over them during the ocean crossing. Many of the Germans were amazed that the Nazi navy had not rescued them in mid-ocean as they had openly boasted to their captors. They were also surprised to learn that the British prison ship traveled virtually all of the way without convoy.

Officer prisoners ranging in rank from colonel to lieutenant were shown consideration due their station. One officer captive wore the iron cross decoration. Several merchant marine captains also were among the prisoners.

Enraged at their fate, many of the younger hot-headed Nazi soldiers tore to shreds the masks given them by the British for protection against gas shell attacks. These are sorely needed in Britain and were to have been returned.

VALLEE PLAYS FOSTER

Stephen Foster, one of America's best loved composers who was born on the 50th anniversary of signing of the Declaration of Independence will be the subject of Rudy Vallee's Fourth of July program Thursday, at 9:00 p. m. when Vallee, with an all-Southern cast, tells the stories of and sings the songs that made Foster immortal.

With Tennessee's own Dinah Shore playing "Jeannie," the woman who inspired Foster to write "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair," Vallee will be assisted by colored comedian Eddie Green and the Four Inkspots, one of the best colored quartets in radio today. Charlie Cantor, heretofore heard on the Fred Allen show, will also appear on the Vallee program. Other Foster music scheduled for July 4 will be "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River," "O Susannah," course, conjectural, but Washington officials consider it highly significant that he moved into both the Baltic states and Romania just when he did. He has had nine months to take whatever spoils may have been agreed on at the Molotov-Von Ribbentrop conference just preceding the war, but has waited until this particular moment to act.

"Camp Town Faces," and "My Old Kentucky Home."

PEARCE SATIRE

Al Pearce and his cast will satirize "Rebecca" on the program for Friday, July 5, at 8:30 p. m. Carl Hoff's orchestra will provide the musical background.

BLONDIE IN POLITICS

Blondie dabbles in politics Monday at 6:30 p. m. over CBS. Blondie's venture into politics is the result of the political broadcasts she and Dagwood have been staying up late to hear. Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake will be starred in the radio version of Chic Young's famous comic strip characters.

RADIO BRIEFS

Drew Pearson and Robert Allen, Washington columnists, will introduce a new series of broadcasts over NBC-Blue network on Mondays at 7:30 p. m. beginning July 8.

George McCall and his "Man About Hollywood" commentary returns to CBS July 5. He will be heard for fifteen minutes of the vacated Kate Smith hour for the summer stanza. Lud Gluskin's music and vocalist will also be heard on the show.

It is reported that Bob Hope is asking for a hundred percent increase in salary from his present sponsor. Both the sponsor and agency have refused the proposal according to last minute information.

Dan Golenpaul, owner of "Information Please" has announced that the show will open for new sponsorship beginning November 15. Lump sum of $8500 is the asking price.

Because of the tremendous success scored by Bert Wheeler and his stooge, Hank Ladd, in Earl Carroll's latest Hollywood show, agencies and sponsors are after platters in an effort to land the show. Records were made by Wheeler and Ladd this week and shipped East for sponsor approval.

For his broadcast July 3, Kenny Baker will sing the Woodpecker Song, "Make Believe Island" and a Hawaiian medley.

NAZI PRISONERS IN CANADA FOR WAR'S DURATION

MONTREAL, July 2—The first batch of German prisoners, minus one of their number who committed suicide by diving through a porthole, were interned in a Canadian prison camp today far from the battlefields of France where they were captured by the British.

The prisoners, their exact number a military secret, arrived at Montreal yesterday aboard a British prison ship. They were sent to Canada to lessen "fifth column" activity and to preclude their becoming auxiliaries to any Nazi troops which may land in England when the long expected German blitzkrieg begins.

Few of the prisoners concealed their hostile feelings as they left the boat under the guns of 250 British officers and soldiers who stood guard over them during the ocean crossing. Many of the Germans were amazed that the Nazi navy had not rescued them in mid-ocean as they had openly boasted to their captors. They were also surprised to learn that the British prison ship traveled virtually all of the way without convoy.

Officer prisoners ranging in rank from colonel to lieutenant were shown consideration due their station. One officer captive wore the iron cross decoration. Several merchant marine captains also were among the prisoners.

Enraged at their fate, many of the younger hot-headed Nazi soldiers tore to shreds the masks given them by the British for protection against gas shell attacks. These are sorely needed in Britain and were to have been returned.
